Dear Parents and Carers

As you know, there has been an extraordinary amount of preparation in our transition to Remote Learning for our students this week. I am grateful for the outstanding work of our staff, the patience of parents and the enthusiasm of our students over the last few days.

The announcement by the Victorian Premier this morning about the commencement of Government school holidays from tomorrow (Tuesday) has no bearing on the situation for us at this time. Our plan to continue with Remote Learning remains unchanged for this week. Therefore, the information circulated to parents on Friday by each Head of School (and available on the Parent Portal) remains relevant.

Today is an important day in the final preparation of the material for Remote Learning. As I have said before, there are many challenges ahead with this approach. We are seeking to anticipate these and address them ahead of time. However, we are learning as we go and looking to refine our practices. To this end I am in the process of developing a comprehensive process of ongoing evaluation and feedback of Remote Learning practices. I will be circulating more about this in the next day or so.

For today, it is important you are reassured we will be proceeding with the transition to Remote Learning as planned for this week.

Yours sincerely

Dr Peter Miller
Principal
